Strauss-Kahn release stuns France

PARIS, France - Dominique Strauss-Kahn's release from house arrest has stunned French politicians, the public and press, who wonder whether he can emerge clean from a sex crime case and return to the presidential race.

Fresh doubts over the credibility of his accuser reignited the story of the decade in France, beating the Monaco royal wedding and the start of the Tour de France as the top topic of dinner-table chatter this weekend.

Claims that the Guinean hotel maid who accuses him of trying to rape her lied to police, and was recorded discussing with a drug-dealer the possibility of getting money out of Strauss-Kahn, opened a new act in the drama.

Strauss-Kahn, a powerful French politician who was head of the IMF global lender until the scandal hit, walked free and untagged from house arrest on Friday pending his next court appearance after a judge heard the latest claims.

The violent nature of the accusations -- that he chased the maid around his hotel suite, grabbed her vagina and forced her to give him oral sex -- had prompted mourning for France's image in the world.

Despite all this, a poll published by Harris Interactive on Sunday showed a majority of 49 percent of French people now approved of Strauss-Kahn returning to politics, with 45 percent opposed.

African Union will not cooperate with Gadhafi arrest warrant

Members of the African Union says they will not honour the International Criminal Court's arrest warrant for Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, his son Saif al-Islam Gadhafi and his brother-in-law Abdullah al-Sanussi, saying that the measure jeopardizes efforts to negotiate a peace deal in the war-torn nation.

The court's judges said the arrests were necessary "to ensure their appearances before the court," ensure that the three "do not continue to obstruct and endanger the court's investigations" and "prevent them from using their powers to continue the commission of crimes."

Gadhafi has made it clear that he would not recognize the court's authority.

Some analysts said last week that the court's move could damage efforts to get Gadhafi to end his 42-year reign, stopping him from leaving the country for fear of being prosecuted

Mladic 'won't appear in court on Monday': lawyer

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands - Ex-Bosnian Serb army chief Ratko Mladic has refused to reappear before a UN war crimes court to plead to charges for his role in the 1992-95 Bosnian war, including genocide, his lawyer said Sunday.

Mladic, arrested in Serbia and delivered last month to the Hague-based UN war crimes court for former Yugoslavia (ICTY) after almost 16 years on the run, is supposed to be back to the courtroom today to plead to charges of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes.

Mladic was first hauled before the ICTY on June 3, where he chose not to plead to what he called 11 "obnoxious" charges.

Policlinic providing excellent service to Diabetics

On Aruba the incidence of Diabetes is very high. The vast majority of diabetics can be treated by their house doctor. However, many diabetics never achieve a well regulated sugar level. It is a known fact that a sugar level that remains high for many years will eventually cause damage to the nerves, the kidneys, the eyes and veins.

At the Dr. Horacio Oduber Hospital we see daily the complications which diabetes causes. One such cause is the amputation of a leg or dialysis. For this reason the Board of the Hospital decided to start a Policlinic (out-patient service) especially for diabetics. During the past two years, Dr. Hoogendam together with other internists and a nurse with special diabetes training began designing a clinic especially for those suffering with diabetes. Our medical specialists have noted that many diabetics come to their consultation a few times and then don't show up any more. The problem with this is that in order to treat the problem with sugar well the patient must learn a new life style which does not happen from one day to the other. This may take a long time to learn. This means then that if a patient comes only a few times for consultation he will never achieve the proper regulation of his sugar level. Hence, the reason that the Hospital designed a treatment program for the duration of about three months. After said period the patient will have all the necessary tools to take care of his sugar level. He will also receive information on how to live a healthy life with diabetes. After the 3 month treatment program the patient is evaluated and if all is well he can then be directed to his house doctor for his regular treatment and control.

It is important to emphasize the difference between the Policlinic and the Center for Health. The difference is that it is not possible to receive service at the Policlinic without a referral letter from the house doctor. The policlinic is especially for those who have certain complications that have arisen because of their diabetes for which the house doctor requests assistance. Because of the special treatment plan which includes the expertise of an internist and a specially trained nurse, the patient can be assured of an integral treatment.

As it stands right now, every week there are at least 5 new diabetic patients on Aruba. This makes the need for this outpatient service so necessary.

The Hospital is very pleased with the professionalism of the Diabetic Policlinic. Patients who have used their service are also pleased.

Minister presents "Status of Women in Aruba!"

Aruba Minister of Social Affairs & Economics, Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer.

The Women in Leadership Conference organized by Aruba Trade & Industry Association (ATIA) with an audience of almost all women, listened intently to the discourse by Aruba Minister of Social Affairs & Economics, Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer. The Minister, one of the speakers at the illustrious conference, talked about the status of women in Aruba and of the roll she believes the government should play in improving the situation of women and in eliminating the gaps that still exist to achieve true equality between the sexes.

A great deal of information was presented. The audience got a clear view of the situation as it relates to education, health, economic participation and political participation. The Minister emphasized that for Aruba to stimulate more leadership from women in our community certain conditions must be regulated in different areas both in the private as well as in the public sector.

However, Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer is of the opinion that it is not prudent to sit around and wait for the situation to be ideal for women to begin participating; they must begin working towards this. As an example she cited the area of politics, which according to her is definitely not yet female-friendly. She referred to the roll that government must play in eliminating the discriminatory laws that still exist.

Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer participated throughout the entire conference and reported being inspired by the event. A large number of women indicated their interest in working together to help improve the position of women on Aruba.

Woo Woo for Aruba Reef Care 2011!

Woo Woo for Reef Care Project 2011

Young volunteers proudly show off their certificate

Reef Care organizer Castro Perez with veteran volunteer Francis Jacobs

Sunday afternoon, July 3, Castro Perez of the Aruba Tourism Authority declared the 18th annual Aruba Reef Care Project an unqualified success; expressing his gratitude to the more than 700 volunteers and many supporting companies that made it possible. Shore areas of Aruba and several important reefs and dive sites received a thorough cleaning over this past weekend; during the final award ceremony and party at Reef Care Headquarters in Naptali Henriquez Park in Oranjestad, Castro confirmed that interested parties can always count on the first weekend of July to be dedicated to restoring Aruba's shore and underwater environment to its naturally pristine condition.

Castro also gave credit to Gweneline Maduro, intern with the ATA this year, and Project Manager Janine Maduro, who assisted in giving out the hundreds of certificates of appreciation to the volunteers. He mentioned that among those donating their time, a group of 175, consisting of Government Ministers, members of Parliament, and their colleagues and family, dedicated themselves to the San Nicolas areas such as Baby and Roger's Beach, Grape Fields, and the Pet Cemetery.

At the end of two long, hot mornings, volunteers enjoyed a well-deserved hot lunch, several cold beers and the satisfaction of a job well done. Woo! Woo!

A magical Sunset Wedding for Natalie & Mathew

On Friday, June 17th, 2011 Natalie Lomas & Mathew Woods said "I do" at one of Aruba's landmarks, the famous Fofoti Trees.

Four years ago while visiting Aruba, they fell in love with the island and especially the Eagle Beach, and because they always dreamed of a destination wedding, Aruba seemed like the perfect choice!

The Beach Blessing was witnessed by 11 of their closest family & friends, and the festivities continued with a Reception at Passions on the Beach Restaurant.

When asked what their experience was from start to finish their comment was: "Everything was arranged just the way we expected it and the wedding itself was hassle free and exactly how we imagined the day would be."

The couple expressed that they are already planning their next visit to Aruba.

Ms. Anne Maduro, Mrs. Lissy Lampe and The Morning News would like to extend their congratulations to Mr. & Mrs. Woods.

Sponsor a Mile with the Radisson

"Responsible Business also implies responsible environmental stewardship," says Glenn Farro, Director of Human Resources at the Radisson Aruba Resort Casino & Spa.

And in the spirit of his declaration, the resort has been scheduling road-side cleanings once a month, as part of the company's commitment to the community of Aruba. The cleaning is also in compliance with the Aruba Hotel And Tourism Association-sponsored, Adopt-A-Mile program, which has been supported by the Radisson for the past decade.

The resort crew made of members of the executive office, including General Manager Rob Smith, and members of the Food & Beverage Department met early in the morning and spent over two hours collecting debris and trash between the Radisson Aruba Resort Casino & Spa and the Sasaki highway.

Wearing their Yes I Can! T-shirts, they picked up mostly plastic bottles, cups, and food take-out containers, and had a lot of fun fishing the hard to reach litter out of the Bubali nature-reserve water-filled ditches.

Pictured here, the considerable amount of trash removed by the Radisson associates, setting an example of environmental stewardship.

Swiss solar plane returns after European flights

Swiss solar-powered aircraft Solar Impulse returned to Switzerland Sunday from Paris' Le Bourget airport, where it been on show, the plane's team said.

"The Solar Impulse HB-SIA prototype, piloted by Andre Borschberg, touched down this evening in Payerne at 7:42 pm (1742GMT) after a 12:31 hour flight powered by solar energy alone," said the team in a statement on its website.

The arrival marked the end of the aircraft's European flight campaign. Solar Impulse had flown to Brussels on May 13, where it stopped for about a month before flying to Le Bourget on June 14.

"With a round the world flight scheduled for 2014, these flights have provided good learning opportunities in terms of slotting the solar aircraft into international air space and landing at international airports," said the plane's team.

Borschberg, who piloted the European flights, said that the plane demonstrated what could be done with solar energy alone.

"The welcome we received in Brussels and Paris was highly motivating for the team as we enter phase two of the project which is building a second plane to fly around the world," he added.

The ultimate goal of the Swiss-based team is to attempt a round the world tour in five stages.

Diesel cars gain traction slowly in US market

After many fits and starts, diesel cars are gaining traction in the US market, fueled largely by German carmakers including Volkswagen, which opened a plant in May in Tennessee.

Diesel auto sales in the United States revved higher this year thanks to some temporary factors, including a shortage of hybrid cars because of disruptions from the Japanese earthquake disaster.

US consumers bought an estimated 9,000 diesel cars in May, up 34 percent from a year earlier, according to the research firm Baum & Associates.

Some analysts say the long-term view is getting better as well for diesel, whose image has been tarnished by concerns about smelly cars and poor availability of diesel fuel outside the truck sector.

Diesels have been available in the US for decades, but the market pales compared to Europe where they make up around half the auto fleet.

Alan Baum of Baum & Associates said that outside the large pickup truck segment, around one percent of US cars are diesels, and that total diesel market share is expected to be around 4.5 percent this year.

By 2015, Baum expects diesel to grow to 6.0 to 6.5 percent, "with all of the growth in the smaller vehicles, meaning the one percent will grow to 2.5 or 3.0 percent."

The research firm JD Power & Associates sees the US diesel market share at 3.1 percent in 2011, and growing steadily to 7.4 percent by 2017.

Shuttle Atlantis prepares to rocket into history

The space shuttle Atlantis is seen on the launch pad at Kennedy Space Center, Florida in June 2011.

The shuttle Atlantis is poised to launch Friday on the final flight of the 30-year American program, a journey that marks the end of an era of US dominance in human space exploration.

The liftoff is scheduled for July 8 at 11:26 am (1526 GMT) from Kennedy Space Center in Florida's Cape Canaveral, sending Atlantis on a 12-day mission to the International Space Station.

Four American astronauts will ride the shuttle on its last tour of duty to stock the orbiting research outpost with plenty of supplies -- 8,000 pounds (3,600 kilograms) worth in all -- and bring back a failed ammonia pump, NASA said.

Up to a million people are expected to turn out along Florida's Atlantic Coast to watch the 135th and final shuttle launch, an estimate between two and three times the typical crowd size, local officials said.

The shuttle has toted heavy loads of equipment to the space lab and back many times over the years, building up what Bolden called "the pinnacle of our current achievement, a stepping stone to the rest of the solar system and the tip of what comes next."

Atlantis's visit will mark the 37th and final trip by a US shuttle to the orbiting space station.

Once the shuttle program ends, the world's astronauts will have to hitch a ride aboard Russia's three-seat space capsules at a cost of $51 million each.

Local communities that depend on Kennedy Space Center for tourist dollars and employment are bracing for the disappearance of 8,000 jobs with the program's closure.

In the meantime, its successor remains uncertain. Several private companies are competing to build a more efficient space capsule that will once again be able to carry astronauts into space, though that will not be ready for several years at least.

NASA also has its sights set on exploring Mars and an asteroid in the coming decades.

Atlantis's four-member crew is smaller than usual because there is no other shuttle in operation to serve as a rescue ship should the need arise while they are in space.

All four astronauts have flown shuttle missions in the past. The commander is retired Navy captain Chris Ferguson, 49; the pilot is Doug Hurley, 44; and mission specialists are Sandra Magnus, 46, and Rex Walheim, 48.

The quartet wore dark-colored business suits as they addressed the media Thursday for a final time before entering quarantine ahead of the flight.

Health & Living

First aid: Choking

Choking occurs when a foreign object becomes lodged in the throat or windpipe, blocking the flow of air. Because choking cuts off oxygen to the brain, administer first aid as quickly as possible.

The universal sign for choking is hands clutched to the throat. If the person doesn't give the signal, look for these indications:

- Inability to talk
- Difficulty breathing or noisy breathing
- Inability to cough forcefully
- Skin, lips and nails turning blue or dusky
- Loss of consciousness

If choking is occurring, the Red Cross recommends a "five-and-five" approach to delivering first aid:

Give 5 back blows. First, deliver five back blows between the person's shoulder blades with the heel of your hand.

Give 5 abdominal thrusts. Perform five abdominal thrusts (also known as the Heimlich maneuver).

Alternate between 5 blows and 5 thrusts until the blockage is dislodged.

To perform abdominal thrusts (Heimlich maneuver) on someone else:

Stand behind the person. Wrap your arms around the waist. Tip the person forward slightly.

Make a fist with one hand. Position it slightly above the person's navel.

Grasp the fist with the other hand. Press hard into the abdomen with a quick, upward thrust — as if trying to lift the person up.

Perform a total of 5 abdominal thrusts, if needed. If the blockage still isn't dislodged, repeat the five-and-five cycle.

If another person is available, have that person call for help while you perform first aid. If the person becomes unconscious, perform standard CPR with chest compressions.

To perform abdominal thrusts (Heimlich maneuver) on yourself:

If you're alone and choking, you'll be unable to effectively deliver back blows to yourself. However, you can still perform abdominal thrusts to dislodge the item.

Place a fist slightly above your navel.

Grasp your fist with the other hand and bend over a hard surface — a countertop or chair will do.

Shove your fist inward and upward.

To prepare yourself for these situations, learn the Heimlich maneuver and CPR in a certified first-aid training course.

Portugal drug law show results ten years on, experts say

Health experts in Portugal said that Portugal's decision 10 years ago to decriminalise drug use and treat addicts rather than punishing them is an experiment that has worked.

"There is no doubt that the phenomenon of addiction is in decline in Portugal," said Joao Goulao, President of the Institute of Drugs and Drugs Addiction, a press conference to mark the 10th anniversary of the law.

The number of addicts considered "problematic" -- those who repeatedly use "hard" drugs and intravenous users -- had fallen by half since the early 1990s, when the figure was estimated at around 100,000 people, Goulao said.

Other factors had also played their part however, Goulao, a medical doctor added.

"This development can not only be attributed to decriminalisation but to a confluence of treatment and risk reduction policies."

Portugal's holistic approach had also led to a "spectacular" reduction in the number of infections among intravenous users and a significant drop in drug-related crimes, he added.

A law that became active on July 1, 2001 did not legalise drug use, but forced users caught with banned substances to appear in front of special addiction panels rather than in a criminal court.

The panels composed of psychologists, judges and social workers recommended action based on the specifics of each case.

Since then, government panels have recommended a response based largely on whether the individual is an occasional drug user or an addict.

Of the nearly 40,000 people currently being treated, "the vast majority of problematic users are today supported by a system that does not treat them as delinquents but as sick people," Goulao said.

Drug use statistics in Portugal are generally "below the European average and much lower than its only European neighbour, Spain," the report also said.

First E. coli death reported in France

BORDEAUX, France - A 78-year-old French woman has died in intensive care in Bordeaux from a deadly kidney disease caused by E.coli, French regional health officials said yesterday.

She had been hospitalized in Bordeaux since June 24 with hemolytic uremic syndrome — the rare kidney condition that the most seriously ill victims of the outbreak are suffering from.

Seven other patients remain at the same French hospital.

The strain of bug in this outbreak is different from the one, sourced to Germany, that killed around 50 people recently across Europe.

Experts are advising people to avoid raw salad shoots and seeds, saying that if they are to be eaten, the foods should be steamed and hot throughout.

The French sufferers are thought to have been infected by vegetable sprouts at the same location - a leisure centre at Begles near Bordeaux.

Cas Animal Cont'd A message to dog owners from an Angel

Be an Angel, don't lease your dog poster

We applaud individuals who have achieved some measure of fame in the media using their celebrity status to support worthy causes. Imagine our delight to find that Ian Somerhalder, the handsome star of "The Vampire Diaries" on the WB, is a staunch animal activist, supporting the largest no-kill animal shelter in his home state of Louisiana and championing their cause by organizing and conducting major fundraisers.

Cas Animal Foundation is Aruba's single no-kill shelter, which is now contained in the home of Kiki Arndt, who began saving and rehabilitating abandoned and abused dogs and cats 14 years ago, when she first arrived on the island. A part of our campaign is to also raise awareness of the more common abuses and how much harm they do, such as tying up a dog with a choke chain.

Young dogs are energetic, social creatures with no greater desire than to love their masters and be with them; think hard on how you will keep your dog before taking a puppy into the home. Kiki's latest edition to the 80+ dogs she now cares for in her house is Tyson, who is recovering from a wound caused by being tied up with a choke chain that nearly killed the dog.

When Kiki found him, "the skin around his neck was cut through down to the bone, and part of it was necrotic." Every day, Tyson is having his bandage changed at Natalie Booi's Animal Care Clinic in Paradera, and he is on the mend, the dead tissue has fallen away and thankfully, gangrene was avoided because he was rescued in time. The tissue around his neck area will always be weakened, and he will never be able to wear a collar again.

Just as we contemplated the consequences for many dogs on Aruba left chained in the relentless sun, we came upon this most pertinent ad campaign from PETA 2, featuring "Angel" David Boreanaz and his two dogs, Fritz and Bertha Blue, which also brings forward Kiki's message and that of other organizations dedicated to the humane treatment of animals.

THE MORNING NEWS supports Kiki in her campaign to protect Aruba's stray and abused dogs and cats. The smallest donation assists in her efforts to help them raise the funds she needs to build a proper animal shelter on land she has already been awarded by the government for this purpose. Donations can be made by calling her at: 565-2130 or 742-8732, where she can also be reached to report a stray or injured dog in need of care. She maintains an Animal Ambulance just for this purpose, often helping dog owners who cannot transport their pet to the vet's office for necessary care. She encourages island visitors to adopt one of her dogs or cats; if not one of hers, then perhaps a loyal and loving cunucu dogs they have befriended on the beach or streets. She will walk you through the simple process of transporting it back home. Her expenses for feeding all the animals she has taken in are astronomical, as well as her veterinary bills, and donations can be made by paying on her account at the Contreras Clinics in Shaba or Savaneta, as well as directly to the bank account of Cas Animal Foundation,

Tyson is healing, but can never wear a collar again

200 injured at rally against Italian high-speed rail link

Demonstrators take part a protest against a planned high-speed rail line running through the Susa valley at Chiomonte, northern Italy.

CHIOMONTE, Italy (AFP) - Around two hundred people, mainly police officers, were injured as officers clashed with masked protesters at a rally against a high-speed rail link in northern Italy Sunday, police said.

Clashes between protesters and police left at least 188 officers and about a dozen demonstrators hurt, said officials, after a small group stormed a tunnel which was part of the work site at Chiomonte, west of Turin.

Scuffles between protesters and a heavy police presence continued throughout the day, with a steady exchange of tear gas, stones and molotov cocktails.

Police arrested at least five people and Italy's President Giorgio Napolitano condemned the violence.

Police blamed the trouble on hundreds of masked leftist "black block" extremists from Italy and neighbouring countries.

Protest organisers said tens of thousands of demonstrators had gathered peacefully from surrounding regions to stop the construction of the planned tunnel in the Susa valley.

But a small band broke away from the main group of protestors to enter the gated work site guarded by hundreds of police, who put the number of demonstrators at about 6,000.

The project, agreed by Italy and France in 2001, would slice three hours off the current seven-hour train journey between Paris and Milan.

But the development has provoked fierce opposition, not least among 23 local mayors.

In a statement, President Napolitano condemned what he said was the work of groups "trained in illegal violence."

He was joined by Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi and figures across the political spectrum.

Police were out in force on Sunday as authorities had expected more trouble from radical groups within the protest movement after similar clashes last week.

Twenty-five policemen and four protestors were slightly injured on June 27 when a demonstration at the same spot turned violent and police responded with tear gas.

Before Sunday's events, the leader of the "No Tav" (No to the high-speed train) movement, Alberto Perino, said demonstrators would have "bare hands and clean hands, against those whose hands are neither bare nor clean".

Work on the main 58-kilometre (36-mile) tunnel, of which 12 kilometres are in Italy, is scheduled to begin in 2013 and due to go into service around 2023.

Crude Oil Leaked into the Yellowstone river

NEW YORK - Up to 1,000 barrels of crude oil may have leaked into the Yellowstone River in Montana, according to Exxon Mobil Corp.

The oil company said Sunday that it doesn't know what caused the leak, which came from one of its pipelines. It said the pipeline had undergone an inspection in December, and that a federal agency had conducted a field audit of the pipeline's integrity management program in June.

Exxon said in a statement that pipeline pumps were shut down within seven minutes of pressure loss. It estimates that the equivalent of 750 to 1,000 barrels of crude oil leaked into the river.

Exxon added that it is monitoring air quality across the area, but there is no danger to public health. It added that it is telling municipal water systems to monitor water quality. So far there have been no reports of affected water.

The company said that crews from its nearby Billings, Mont., refinery responded to the leak using boom and absorbent pads to pick up oil. Fifty more oil spill response specialists were expected to join the clean-up effort.

Europe struggles with Act II of Greek debt tragedy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AFP) - Europe bought time this weekend to avoid a Greek bankruptcy, but tough negotiations lie ahead to save Athens and prevent the eurozone debt crisis from descending into global drama.

Greece will be able to pay its bills this month after eurozone finance ministers cleared the way late Saturday for the next 12-billion-euro tranche of last year's 110-billion-euro ($160 billion) EU-IMF bailout.

But the ministers still need to work on a second rescue package potentially of similar size to ensure Athens can stay afloat until at least 2014, warding off a devastating default that would reverberate across Europe.

European diplomats warn that eurozone finance chiefs are unlikely to finalise a second bailout at their next meeting on July 11 and that Greece may have to wait until September.

Negotiations for a new rescue are more complex because some governments, especially Germany, want private investors to share the burden by agreeing to voluntarily "roll over" their Greek debt.

The hope is that banks, insurers and pension funds will buy new Greek bonds to replace those maturing soon, but in a way that will not be interpreted as a default by credit rating agencies.

Their plan won the backing of a key global finance group, the Institute of International Finance (IIF), which represents banks, insurers and investment funds.

Greece is also under pressure to swiftly implement 28.4 billion euros in budget cuts and tax hikes, and a 50-billion-euro privatisation programme, that the parliament approved last week despite riots in the streets of Athens.

Gold Coast Aruba: Great savings for large families on holiday rentals

Clubhouse - back

Aruba's newest and most innovative gated community has enjoyed steady sales since breaking ground, as many are finding the secure surroundings and outstanding amenities are just what they were looking for before considering purchasing property on the island. Some owners are using the villas or town homes as vacation retreats rather than full time and are taking advantage of Gold Coast's rental services to turn their investment into ready income.

"The greater portion of home owners are using their 'home away from home' in Aruba to escape the winter months, or spend holidays with the family on the island," noted Gold Coast developer Fito Croes. To assist in the demand for more complete facilities for groups and families, famed hotelier Ed Malone has been placed in charge of the rental program.

Staying at Gold Coast is a very attractive proposition for those traveling with groups that would require multiple hotel rooms. Two and three bedroom Villas or Town Homes accommodate large numbers and offer extensive amenities along with a final cost resulting in considerable savings. The community is minutes to the best beaches and all the casino action, and offers a quiet and secluded getaway with two swimming pools and specialized services with more on the way, such as a fitness room, tennis courts and mini-mall. Ed can arrange maid service, babysitters, caterers, airline pick-up and drop-off; they even boast a shopping service to stock your shelves before arrival.

Gold Coast accommodations are elegant and spacious, offering privacy for parents or a few couples. Beautifully appointed kitchens and bathrooms grace each abode; barbecues and lounges are provided for friendly cookouts and truly savoring the island life. All homes come with cable TV, high-speed fiberoptic Internet connection, individual washer/dryer, and are fully air-conditioned. Cribs, high chairs and hair dryers are available for a modest fee. Concierge services to arrange rental cars, spa appointments, activities and restaurant reservations are all part of the package.

Check-in for your holiday escape is conducted in the comfort of your vacation home, not while waiting on line at check-in desk. In every way, Gold Coast seeks to pamper their guests while providing them with the feeling of being in a cozy community, not the normally bustling resort, particularly experienced during the major holidays. If you wish an optimal vacation experience with great savings, visit their website: www.goldcoastaruba.com to get acquainted with the community and the layout, details and availability of accommodations, or call 586-2200 to talk personally to a Gold Coast representative.

Grouper control invasion of lionfish on coral reefs

Lionfish are threatening the eco-system of the US and Caribbean coral reefs

Coral Grouper

Grouper may be able to limit the invasion of lionfish on Caribbean coral reefs, reports a study published this week in the online journal PLoS One. Lionfish, which are not found naturally in the Caribbean, are believed to have been released from aquariums in the United States and eventually made their way to the Bahamas in 2004. Lionfish numbers have increased dramatically in the last few years and they have now invaded the entire Caribbean.

Although lionfish are among the most beautiful fish in the sea, they are voracious predators of small fish and conservationists are concerned about their impact on native fish populations.

A research team from the University of Queensland (Australia) and American Museum of Natural History (New York) studied the invasion of lionfish in a remote stretch of coral reef in the Bahamas. The reports lead author, Professor Peter Mumby, states, "In 2006 we did not encounter any lionfish but by 2010 they were at all of our 12 study sites. However, the number of lionfish was ten times lower in reefs with lots of large groupers". The team surveyed reefs inside and outside the Exuma Cays Land and Sea Park, which is one of the best marine reserves in the Caribbean, having been established in 1959. Prof Mumby continues, "With long-term protection from fishing, grouper numbers are among the highest in the Caribbean and we believe that groupers are eating enough lionfish to limit their invasion on these reefs".

This news is positive for conservation efforts but Prof Mumby adds a cautionary note, "Years of over-fishing means that densities of large grouper, like the Nassau grouper, are low throughout most of the Caribbean. If we want grouper to help us control the lionfish invasion we'll have to develop a taste for lionfish instead of grouper and drastically reduce the fishing of this species".

Further information:

The lionfish (Pterois volitans) is naturally found in the Indian and Pacific Oceans but has invaded the Atlantic.

Lionfish have high venomous spines to protect them from predators. Indeed, there are few known predators of lionfish so it is exciting to discover that Caribbean groupers are able to control their numbers. Previous studies have found lionfish in the stomachs of grouper.

Some of the research leading to these results has received funding from the European Union Seventh Framework Programme (P7/2007-2013) under grant agreement no 244161 as part of the FORCE project (www.force-project.eu).

Marta lifts Brazil as Matildas stay in chase

Brazil's Martha celebrates

BOCHUM (AFP) - Star forward Marta inspired Brazil to a 3-0 victory over Norway to reach the quarter-finals of the women's World Cup as Australia stayed in the hunt with a 3-2 win over Equatorial Guinea Sunday.

"Thank God Marta is with 1995 winners Norway and Australia, who are both on three points, meeting in the final group match with the winner joining the South Americans in the last eight.

Brazil join France and Germany, who have already reached the knock-out round

Australia's players (L-R) striker Leena Khamis, striker Lisa de Vanna and defender Servet Unzular celebrate after scoring the 3-1

Brazilian. Thank God she is part of our squad," said coach Kleiton Lima as the five-time world player of the year scored two goals and set up Rosana for a third.

"She is down to earth and humble and yet she is a genius," said Lima of the 25-year-old who demonstrated her famed fancy footwork skills which had been lacking during their opening 1-0 win over Australia.

Brazil have six points from two games to head the group from Group A, with Japan going through in Group B, and the United States and Sweden advancing in Group C with one game to play.

The South Americans need just a point from their final outing against Equatorial Guinea on Wednesday to guarantee top spot which will decide whether they will play the USA or Sweden.

"Our quarter-final rivals, Sweden or the United States, will have a lot of problems even if they're strong teams because we're ready and we've come here to be world champions," warned Marta.

Marta, the top player during the 2007 edition in China with seven goals on Brazil's road to the final, finally got to give a demonstration of her skills despite a pitch made slippery by constant drizzle.

She broke through after 22 minutes when she outwitted Swedish defender Maren Mjelde.

And the game was over within minutes of the restart as Marta raced down the right flank, feeding the ball to Rosana, and two minutes later herself slipped the ball past Ingrid Hjelmseth.

Norway coach Eli Landsem lamented: "We simply didn't have the speed that is required. It was impossible (to stop Marta). We did everything we could but we were punished for not being as fast as we could have been."

Earlier Australia kept their dream alive with goals from Leena Khamis, Emily van Egmond and Lisa De Vanna, with the Africans getting two back thanks to captain Anonman in either half.

"I'm pleased with the win - it means we're still in the competition," said Australian coach Tom Sermanni.

Sydney FC forward Khamis opened for the Matildas after eight minutes.

Anonman equalised after 21 minutes but the 11th-ranked Australians came out battling after the break.

Van Egmond, 17, got her first international goal three minutes later before substitute De Vanna got a third on 51 minutes. Anonman pulled one back for the African side after 83 minutes.

Equatorial Guinea coach Marcello Frigerio said he was proud of the effort shown by his 61st-ranked side who are out of the tournament after their second loss after a 1-0 opening defeat to Norway.

"We regret very much that some of our important players had to be left at home," added Frigerio.

Sisters Salimata and Bilguisa Simporé, both accused of being men, were excluded from the team before the tournament while Anonman remained in the squad despite a pre-tournament gender row.

Monday is a rest day at the competition with the group stages concluding on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Hushovd in yellow as Garmin win team time trial

New Yellow jersey of Overall leader, Norway's Thor Hushovd, celebrates on the podium

LES ESSARTS (AFP) - World champion Thor Hushovd took over the Tour de France yellow jersey from Belgian Philippe Gilbert as Garmin-Cervelo triumphed for the first time on the race's second stage on Sunday.

Hushovd's Garmin team, one of the favourites for the 23km team time trial, set a winning time of 24min 48sec for the punishing event to beat the BMC team of Australia's Cadel Evans into second place by 4sec.

British outfit Team Sky, who had been poised to put Welshman Geraint Thomas into the race lead, finished third just behind BMC, also at 4sec.

Hushovd, who had finished third at 6sec behind Gilbert on the opening stage, pulls on the race leader's jersey by virtue of being his team's best placed rider on Saturday.

LES ESSARTS (AFP) - World champion Thor Hushovd took over the Tour de France yellow jersey from Belgian Philippe Gilbert as Garmin-Cervelo triumphed for the first time on the race's second stage on Sunday.

In the overall standings the Norwegian has the same time as Scottish teammate David Millar, with Evans in third place at 01sec.

Thomas, who had been Sky's highest placed rider on Saturday, is fourth overall at 4sec with Germany's Linus Gerdemann of Leopard-Trek fifth at 10. Thomas kept the white jersey for the race's best placed rider aged 25 and under.

While the Omega-Pharma team stuck to the form book, finishing well out of contention and failing to keep Gilbert in the yellow jersey, Garmin celebrated as a team on the podium where they hoisted team manager Jonathan Vaughters into the air.

Copa America - July 1 - 24

Sluggish Brazil held by Venezuela

LA PLATA (AFP) - Brazil made a tame entrance into the Copa America on Sunday, missing a host of chances in a goalless draw with ultra-minnows Venezuela at the Estadio Unico in La Plata.

The five-times world champions had chances - Milan's Pato notably hitting the woodwork early on. But the longed-for samba football never arrived and it was soon apparent there would be no repeat of the auriverde's 7-0 thumping of the vinotinto in a 1999 group opener.

Ronaldo, Rivaldo and Ronaldinho accounted for four of the goals that day and the Brazilians had before Sunday also won all five previous meetings between the two nations in the competition, scoring 25 goals for just one conceded.

But the baseball-loving Venezuelans have come on since then by leaps and bounds and the only South American country never to make it to the World Cup finals even managed a goalless draw in Brazil during the 2010 World Cup qualifiers.

"This is historic," commented Venezuela coach Cesar Farias.

Selecao coach Mano Menezes sent out an attack-minded line-up, led by Santos' precocious talents Neymar and Paulo Henrique Ganso, who arrived at the event fresh from winning the Copa Libertadores. With Robinho and Pato also to call in up front, Brazil made an early statement of intent.

But they did not follow through.

Ganso only played in Menezes' first match in charge - a 2-0 friendly win last August over the United States but is being talked of as a future mainstay in the side.

However, he and his teammates repeatedly ran into cul de sacs against a resolute Venezuelan defence determined not to be cast as pushovers.

The Brazilians have their eye firmly on the 2014 World Cup which they will host - yet they are also after their ninth Copa and fifth in the past six editions.

They first won the regional championship in 1919, adding further triumphs in 1922, 1949, 1989, 1997, 1999, 2004 and 2007.

Argentina and Uruguay hold the record with 14 each.

Top dog Djokovic stuns Nadal to win Wimbledon title

LONDON (AFP) - Novak Djokovic won his first Wimbledon title on Sunday, dethroning champion Rafael Nadal with a 6-4, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3 triumph to celebrate his coronation as new world number one in style.

It was the 24-year-old Serb's third Grand Slam title, to add to his 2008 and 2011 Australian Open victories, and 50th win in his last 51 matches.

Djokovic, who succeeds Nadal as world number one today, also denied the Spaniard, the champion here in 2008 and 2010, an 11th Grand Slam title.

"It's hard to describe how I feel, it's the best day of my life. This is the most special tournament that I always dreamed about winning when I was young," said Djokovic.
